Excerpt: .A wound made by removing a limb heals best if the cut is made close to the trunk or branch. A stub two or three inches long does not heal, and becomes a lodging place for spores of fungi and bacteria which cause decay and death of the tree. The splitting down of large limbs may often be avoided when pruning by sawing in from the under side first; but, in every case, see that the wound is left clean and smooth. Wounds should also be covered immediately with a coat of paint, shellac or grafting wax, to keep out the moisture and spores before mentioned. Nothing is better for this purpose than pure white lead and linseed oil. The whole philosophy of the pruning of plants rests upon the fact that the various parts are unlike; that each branch is, in a measure, independent and capable of becoming a new individual; that by lessening the conflict between the parts, the growth of the whole is promoted. Pruning is a necessity, and the pruning given by Nature, in a neglected orchard or forest, is more severe than the average man would dare to attempt. It is often urged that pruning should be commenced when the tree is planted, and continued annually throughout the life of the tree. It is doubtful, however, whether equally good results may not be obtained by removing superfluous branches at four or five years of age, rather than by severe...
