Excerpt: . it proved useless, and the cardinal failed in his attempt. The great body of the nation looked with horror at the very idea of an intriguing and savage persecutor obtaining the government of the country. The nobility shrunk from being subordinate to an ambitious churchman; and by general consent the office was conferred on the earl of Arran, who was of royal descent, and next heir to the crown. The new regent possessed many private virtues, but he decidedly wanted the strength of judgment and the firmness of purpose necessary for the government of a country situated as Scotland then was. The queen, not yet a year old, was crowned at Stirling, on Sunday, the 9th of September, 1543, by Cardinal Beaton, the regent Arran, as next in blood, bearing the crown. Commissioners were appointed to take charge of her person; but she...
