It is, indeed, a great privilege to be allowed to lay a tribute upon the grave of a departed friend, but, at the same time, it is a privilege that we would always be happier were we not called upon to embrace. William Beach Lawrence, the honorary Vice-President of this Society for the State of Rhode Island, died in New York, at the Albemarle Hotel, on Saturday, March 26, 1881, in the eighty-first year of his age. My acquaintance with Mr. Lawrence began in the summer of 1868, and, for the remaining thirteen years of his life, our relations were not only friendly, but intimate. This may seem strange, considering the disparity of our years, - he being nearly half a century my senior, - but the great theme that for so long occupied his mind and pen, - the Law of Nations, - was one that had early attracted my attention, and thus our similar tastes bridged over the gulf of years. Living far apart, in different States, our intercourse, except by letter, was necessarily limited; but I recall with great pleasure the occasions when I enjoyed the hospitality of his beautiful home at Ochre Point, and it is with equal satisfaction that I look back to when he was my guest here. Notwithstanding his engrossing labor upon his last great work, he was a no mean correspondent, and I find in my portfolio...
