M. HAMILTON. There have been three dictinct types of secondary schools in this country, the grammar or Latin school of Colonial day modeled after the English type, the academy, and the public high school. The public high school is of comparatively recent development but has become an organic part of the school system in every state in the Union. The early schools of this type arose with the growth of large centers of commerce and manufactures, with the increasing sense of the importance of education in the welfare of the state, and with the expanding interert in the development and administration of great, public educational systems. The English classical School established in Boston, in 1821, is regarded as the pioneer in this movement. It was intended as a school that should complete Boston s system by offering finishing courses to boys intended for mercantile and mechanical occupations. It gave instruction in advanced English studies, such as Mathematics, Geography, the Natural Sciences, History, Logic and Moral and Political Philosophy. Such a course could only be obtained in the English courses of distant academies and consequently was out of reach of the vast majority of those...
