The flooring of the main hall is laid with threeinch pine boards, and is supported by a double colonnade running through the basement hall. Wc sum up our description with the following items: Building covers Main hall Lower, or basement, hall Six committee or officers rooms in the wings or turrets, each Arcade in front of main entrance Arcade, or lobby, directly above Lobby directly below We cannot conclude this brief description of our modem Parthenon, which, at least in grandeur of proportions, resembles its prototype of the Acropolis, without expressing the hope that the same liberal and enterprising spirit on the part of our tax-payers, which has achieved thus much, will enable the Agricultural Board to go on and perfect this great work in all its details and appointments. Let the grand hall be surrounded with an open arcade or gallery some six feet in width and fifteen in night, arched and richly ornamented with consols and arabesques. Let the windows be furred out some two feet, for the purpose of forming cabinets, for mineralogy and other branches of natural history, between them, with pilasters and friezed capitals. Let the summits of the wings or turrets be crowned with observatories, properly equipped for astronomical and meteorological purposes; and finally, let a corps of efficient lecturers be organized, whose office it shall be, monthly or oftener, to analyze the objects that may here be collected or exhibited, discover the principles of their excellence,...
