Such is the prediction of the royal psalmist respecting the Christian church. lie commences the psalm with a glowing description of the excellency and dignity of the Messiah, her founder and head. My heart, he says, is inditing a good matter, or more literally, boileth or bubbleth up a good word. I speak of the things which I have made touching the King My tongue is the pen of a ready writer. He was, says Bishop Horne, full of the divine spirit, which inspired him with the good word or the glad tidings of salvation. The sacred fire enclosed in his heart, expanded itself within, till at length it broke forth with impetuosity to enlighten and revive mankind with the glorious prediction touching the King, the Messiah; and this was uttered under the guidance of the spirit, as the pen is directed by the hand that holds it Having spoken of the King, the head of the church, of his spiritual beauty and eloquence, for grace was poured into his lips; of victories and power over his enemies; of his throne and sceptre; of his righteousness, royal robes and palace, all glorious within, he introduces the church as his spouse. He describes her dress and appearance, foretells her future prosperity when nations would bring their choicest gifts and lay them at her feet. Next he sets forth her altars...
