Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book is more than a personal memoir; it blends biography and history to create an engaging account of how young Americans during 1960s and early 1970s, grew-up in the shadow of the Vietnam War. With televisions in the majority of American homes, the broadcast networks would beam the daily news stories in vivid color into our living and dining rooms showing the human suffering and devastation that war was inflicting on our young soldiers and Vietnamese civilians alike. It was a time of great division within our country s social and political fabric. It was the civil rights era, a time of racial strife and cultural awakening. All these elements reached a boiling point during that explosive time period. This is a story of a young man born in this age of political tension and ideological conflict. The cold war, as it was known, was between competing value and belief systems; communism verses a democratic republic form of government, both seeking global domination. A story of young American men and women who were sitting in high school classrooms throughout the nation struggling to make sense of their personal identities and their national identities as they prepared to leave the security of the classroom for the insecurity of a world engulfed in chaos and self-destruction. This was the generation of Americans who had witnessed the assassination of a young President Kennedy, the launching of the Russian Sputnik satellite, and an escalation in the cold war that divided Europe, east against the west. As young Americans coming of age in the decade of the sixties, my classmates and I had no reason to trust military generals who warned America...
