Excerpt: .the sums received for them adding not a little to the income of the quarrymen. So many are obtained in this and other ways that specimens of ichthyosaurs are perhaps more frequently seen in the museums of the world than those of any other extinct backboned animal. Fairly complete skeletons may now be purchased of dealers in such things for from fifty to seventy-five dollars. As may be supposed, the best and most complete collections of these fossil remains are those of the British Museum in London and the museum in Stuttgart. From a study of those of the last-mentioned museum Professor Fraas has learned many interesting facts and reached many interesting conclusions regarding the life-habits of the ichthyosaurs. In the accompanying figure (Fig. 59) is shown a photographic reproduction of a very complete specimen, in which not only is the outline of the whole body shown, but also much of the carbonized remains of the muscles and skin has been detected. Fig. 59.--Ichthyosaurus quadricissus. (From a photograph from B. Hauff, Paleontologisches Atelier, Holzmaden.) The attachment of the paddles to the body was broad anteroposteriorly, proving conclusively that they could not have been much used in propulsion, either in the water or upon land, since such use would require a fore-and-aft movement, and a consequent twisting or rotation of the whole arm or leg, which, because of the broad attachment, must have been very difficult, if not impossible. Microscopic examination of the remains of skin...
